The ex-Governor is very popular in Wisconsin and he is becoming equally popular in his department here. He said to-night that Mr. Willitts, the assistant secretary, will not be here for some time yet, as he has to wind up his affairs as President of the Michigan Agricultural College. Mr. Rusk said that he expected that the Agricultural Department would be enlarged at the next session of Congress by the addition of some of the bureaus which are now loosely attached to other departments. One of these is the Signal Service, which has more connection with the Agricultural than with the War Department. The Geological Survey, it is thought, will also be attached to the Agricultural Department. Secretary Rusk said that Prof. Powell was in favor of such a change.

The department expects to give a good account of itself and to make a display that Americans will not be ashamed of.
The money will not be wasted in the payment of salaries and other such expenses. The accounts of the commissioners whom President Cleveland sent to Latengianal Exposition at Barsioners whom President Cleveland sent to the International Exposition at Bar-celona and at Brussels last year, as re-cently sent to the State Department, make interesting reading. Congress ap-propriated $25,000 to enable the United States to make a display at Barcelona, the exhibit being wholly those of private firms. The commissioner managed to spend $26,700, but according to his re-port the money pretty much all went port the money pretty much all went for "decorations" of which he gives a elp a long account, but says nothing about the display of goods. His chief item of expenditure was $6.041 for carpenter work.

Every attempt to draw him into conversation failed. No weather was severe enough to intercept his tireless round, and in the terrible blizard of last year he would have perished if sympathizing farmers had not forcibly detained him. As it was, he was quite badly frozen. Some time last fall a cancer formed on his lower lip, and rapidly ate its way through the jaw to the throat. He was taken into custody by the Humane Society's officers, near Middletown, and brought to the Hartford Hospital on the morning of December 3. He refused to stay, and as there was no authority for restraining his liberty, he was released. The next morning he appeared in North Haven, thirty miles distant, wet, cold and ravenously hungry, as shown by his eating six bowls of breed seaded in coffee. He claimed to be a member of one of gry, as shown by his eating six bowls of bread soaked in coffee.

famous "Old Leather Man," who, for a quarter of a century, had been a character in Connecticut.

It is probable that his true history will never be known, for the queer old fellow could never be induced to speak a full sentence either in English or in the language of France, of which country he was a native.

The story generally accepted, although its origin is unknown, is that his name had been configured in the day face and neck. The police was Jules Bourgelay, and that he was a native of Lyons. In early manhood he fell in love with the daughter of M, Laron, a leather manufacturer, but her father objected, as Bourgelay was without means. Finally M, Laron took him into his employ as a confidential clerk. This was about 1857. Business dopression led to speculations by Bourgelay with M. Bourgelay became insane and after two years confinement in a private asy-lum fied to America. He first came to public attention in Litchfield county, where he tramped around doing little odd jobs at tinkering on the pots and kettles of the farmers' wives. He wore a suit of clothing made wholly of pieces of boots' legs, stitched together with thongs, as a leather belt is laced. His leather cap had a visor, and was of a military design. His boots were discarded ones picked up or given him, and he alwaysadded heavy wooden soles. Over each shoulder was slung a leather bag, one containing scraps of food and the other pieces of leather.

Early in the history of his ceaseless tramping he established a regular circuit, beginning in Litchfield county, thence eastward to the Connecticut river (which he never crossed), thence down the river valley and westward through New Haven county to Fairfield county, and thence-northward to the starting point. His circuit occupied four weeks, and in mild weather he was so regular that the people along the route knew to the day, and almost the hour, when to expect him. The Central Glass Works was compelled to shut down about 8:30 s. m. yester day, on account of a shortage of gas in the mains of the Natural Gas Company of West Virginia; at least two represe. tatives of the company who ordered the tatives of the company who ordered the shut down, gave that as a reason.

A reporter met President Scott yesterday. Mr. Scott was pretty mad. He said the two men came to the works at half past 8 and ordered the gas shut off, saying there was a shortage. The lears were full of ware and the pots full of molten glass, which was in danger of being ruined by shutting off the fire. Still the company's representatives insisted on an immediate shut down, Mr. Scott says, refusing even a half hour's time to finish the annealing process. All the response they made to arguments was, "We know our business better than you dô." They promised that the gas should be on by noon, and to notify Mr. Scott when to turn it on. Mr. Scott said last evening that it was still off. "Still," he added, "people wonder why we think of moving our factory away from Wheeling."

away from Wheeling."
Messrs. Scott and Shaub left last night for Lancaster and Tiffin, O., to inspect the sites offered there. A telegram was received last evening from Indianapolis offering free gas and free land in that city.

A reporter called at the West Virginia A reporter called at the West Virginia Gras Company's office yesterday afternoon and asked about the shut-down at the Central. He was told that the works were only off an hour or two, the gas being all right shortly after noon. The trouble was a shortage of supply, caused probably by large consumption, though a small leak up Caldwell's run contributed to the trouble. The leak was soon repaired.

"THE BEGGAR STUDENT." he Tuneful Opera Excellently Rendered

Mr. Baker's Company gave at the Opera House last night, the second of heir engagement, Milleecker's "The Beggar Stadent." The house was sgain rowded with the leading patrons of musements. The grand choruses of he opera were never better rendered here, the costuming was brilliant and line, and the leading roles were admiratheir engagement, Millecker's "The Beggar Student." The house was again crowded with the leading patrons of amusements. The grand choruses of the opera were never better rendered the opera were never better rendered here, the costuming was brilliant and fine, and the leading roles were admirably filled. Miss Johnson was very well suited to the part of Laura, while Miss Murpby was an ideal Bonislava, and Miss Sharp a very satisfactory Countess. Miss Barton was a gay and soldierly Liculationati, Mr. Armand sang and acted well in the title role, and Mr. Wolff was a great Ollendorf.

This afternoon "The Merry War," one of the most pleasing of Strauss's works, will be the bill, and this evening "Robert Macaire" ("Erminie"). The company is well suited to both selections.

Something Worth Reading.
"A Tin Roof" is the title of a little book just issued by Messrs. Merchant & Co., 517 Arch street, Philadelphia. The urpose of the publication is to supply to builders, architects and the genera best methods of constructing a tin roof and as to the right materials to be used to secure satisfactory and permanent re-sults. We especially recommend the book, which is intended for gratuitous distribution, to mill owners. They are very apt to trust the matter of roofing wholly to builders and they usually wholly to builders and they usually know really very little about the character of the tin used or the excellence or the defectiveness of the job. This pamphlet will help them to protect their interests. It is very explicit, perfectly comprehensible, and we think wholly trustworthy. It is quite profusely illustrated and the cuts indicate processes of applying tin-roofing which insure excellence.

believed to be the sentiments of the majority of the people.

The resolution was explicit, and required little explanation. In view of the past twenty years it ought to obtain the support of the House. While it might be true that the bill was within the spirit of the British North American act, yet Parliament possessed authority to deal with matters imperiling Canada's national existence. He reviled what he termed the history of the Jesuit order.

It was true that the first work in the direction of Christianizing the heathen was performed by Jesuils and hundreds of them with a self-sacrifice which was admirable, had lost their lives. The reservation in the subsequent capitulation applied to all religions. The
